Sydney police chase nets alleged robber

July 12, 2007 - 12:19PM

A man allegedly linked to a string of robberies has been arrested after a police chase in Sydney's southwest.

Highway patrol officers allegedly spotted the 33-year-old driving a stolen Lexus on Wednesday.

The luxury car had been linked to robberies in the areas surrounding Sutherland, in Sydney's south and northwest suburbs.

Police pursued the car as it was driven from Girraween towards Parramatta Railway Station, where it was dumped. The man, from Girraween, was arrested inside the station.

It's alleged that inside the car police found stolen property linked to robberies in the Holroyd area, in Sydney's west.

Inside the man's house, police allegedly found other items suspected of being stolen, including a TV, DVD players and several pieces of gold jewellery.

He was taken to hospital and treated for a minor hand injury.

The man, who was wanted on four first instance warrants for breaking entering and stealing and a breach of parole, has been charged with several other offences.

Police are making further enquiries into another 20 break and enters in the Holroyd area.
