Fake cop steals car at gunpoint

September 4, 2007 - 9:15AM

Two men, one posing as a police officer, robbed a man of his car at gunpoint in Sydney's inner west overnight.

The man was sitting with a woman in her Toyota Corolla in Comer Street, Burwood, about 1.10am (AEST) today, when they were approached by the two unknown men.

One of the men, posing as an undercover police officer, demanded the keys to the woman's Toyota and the man's purple Honda CRX, which was parked nearby.

When the couple asked to see police identification the man threatened them with a gun.

They then handed over the keys to his car.

The offenders fled in the man's Honda and were last seen travelling along Neich Parade.

The victims told police that shortly before the incident a Lexus IS 200 sedan, with up to five males on board, had parked next to them before driving off.

Anyone with any information is urged to contact Burwood Police Station on (02) 9745 8499 or Crime Stoppers on 1800 333 000.
